

REPUBLICAN SWEEP IN ASSEMBLY SEEN

Tanner Also Predicts Success of New Constitution, Despite Tammany Fight.

The next Assembly will have a Republican majority of about forty, according to Frederick C. Tanner, chairman of the Republican State Committee, last night. Mr. Tanner also predicted the adoption of the new constitution, despite the efforts of Tammany Hall to defeat it, with the hope of possibly controlling the next convention. Here is Mr. Tanner's prediction on the results of to-morrow's election:

"A careful canvass of the Assembly districts indicates the certain election of a Republican majority to the Assembly of 1916.

"Of the 150 districts, our reports count eighty-five as surely Republican, forty-two as surely Democratic and twenty-three as doubtful.

"Of the districts classed as doubtful, making allowance for local conditions so far as it is possible to determine them, a fair estimate would give the Republicans at least half, which would make the Republican strength in the next Assembly ninety-six or ninety-seven, and this, I believe, will closely approximate the actual result of next Tuesday's vote.

"The constitution will be adopted. It is impossible to make an exact estimate of a vote in which so many Democrats and Progressives are joining with Republicans for the common good. But the reports throughout the state give a safe majority both in number of counties and in population."

Germans Fix Potato Prices.

Berlin, Oct. 31 (by wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.).—The government has made further regulations governing the sale price of potatoes. It is provided that cultivators must sell at a figure between 275 and 305 pfennigs (from 69 to 76 cents) a hundred pounds. The price to consumers must be at an advance of no more than 150 pfennigs on the producer's price.

GOLDMAN CLEW TRAPPED KAPLAN

SCHMIDT BETRAYED BY BERKMAN BOAST

Los Angeles Fugitives Would Have Been Safe but for Friends. It Is Asserted.

When Guy B. Biddinger, head of the Val O'Farrell Detective Agency, was shown a letter yesterday from Emma Goldman denying that David Kaplan, the Los Angeles dynamiter, would be a witness against Matthew Schmidt, his fellow conspirator, he declared that it was through Emma Goldman that Kaplan was found, after a five years' search extending around the globe.

"More than that," said Mr. Biddinger, "it was Goldman's friend Berkman who enabled me to get Matthew Schmidt here in New York."

Miss Goldman's letter, dated Philadelphia, where she is lecturing, was provoked by the announcement in The Tribune last Wednesday that Kaplan was negotiating with District Attorney Woolwine, of Los Angeles, and probably would be a witness for the government. In it she said:

"Permit me to inform your readers that there is not a word of truth in the story. I am in daily communication with the defense and the two accused men, Kaplan and Schmidt. I have known Kaplan for fifteen years, and I know that he is the kind of a man who would rather die than implicate a comrade, even if he had anything to confess. Furthermore, I have received, only a few days ago, a communication from one of the men connected with the defense and publicly work to the effect that it was Detective McLaren who is guilty of the vilification of David Kaplan; that the latter has protested against this contemptible method, and that he has announced he will in the future see no one connected with the prosecution until his own trial comes up."

"The prosecution must be in a sorry state with its evidence if it will stoop to such desperate and despicable methods to sweat and grill a man who, according to American law, must be considered innocent until he is proven guilty."

"Kaplan's revolutionary traditions, coupled with character and integrity, preclude any possibility of betraying a comrade."

"There is not a particle of doubt," said Mr. Biddinger yesterday, "that Goldman knows Kaplan as she says she does. When we picked him up in the anarchist colony on Breckenridge Island, near Seattle, her private address and telephone number were in his notebook. So also were private numbers of Reitman, Berkman and the others of the inner circle of anarchists in this city."

"It is because Goldman knew Kaplan and because of her big mouth that it was possible for us to get him. We had looked all over the world for him, tracing him here, there, everywhere. Finally the trail got cold. Previously the pair had been clever enough to split, making it much more difficult to trace them. The first that I knew that Schmidt was in New York was after the Caron bomb explosion, when Berkman boasted that 'the real guy is here in New York now.' A little more of that sort of boasting and it was clear that Schmidt could be got right here in little old New York."

"We located him and waited a while for Kaplan to show. He did not. Then Captain Deery and I picked Schmidt up on Broadway. We did not then know where Kaplan was."

"About that time Goldman went West. When she came back she announced that she had seen Kaplan recently and that all was well with him. As we knew that Goldman had just come from the anarchist headquarters on Breckenridge Island, it did not require many mental revolutions to see that that was the place to look for him. It was just a trip West, the 9 o'clock boat to the island and we had our man. He had been there for weeks. His whereabouts had been known to any number of anarchists, and he was safe just as long as Goldman kept her mouth shut."

PUPILS' GALLERY CALLED ILLEGAL

Identification Scheme Involves Bylaw Violation, Says
Wallstein.

According to the bylaws of the Board of Education the Board of Superintendents had no authority to grant permission to the Willson Magazine Company to take pictures of the school children for the identification plan urged by John W. Davis, director of the Bureau of Compulsory Education.

This is the report sent to the Mayor by Leonard M. Wallstein, Commissioner of Accounts, following his investigation of the affair, at Mr. Mitchell's request.

The Board of Education's request for funds for this purpose was turned down. Mr. Wallstein says, during the consideration of the annual budget. Thereafter W. Foster Hall, of the Willson Magazine Company, Philadelphia, offered to take the pictures free of charge, his company's profit to come by selling duplicates to the school children at 10 cents a picture.

Mr. Davis approved and brought it up at a meeting of the Board of Superintendents held on June 24. The board adopted the following:

"Resolved, That the Board of Superintendents recommends to the committee of special schools the approval of the plan of the Willson Magazine Company, of Philadelphia, for taking index photographs of school children for identification purposes."

No part of this plan, the Commissioner says, was submitted to the Board of Education, because Mr. Davis did not think its approval necessary, since the Board of Superintendents had approved of the matter. Accordingly, in the last of September the Willson Magazine Company began to take pictures at the various schools.

Teachers canvass the classes to see how many pupils wish to purchase the pictures, and also collect the money for the Willson company. This, Commissioner Wallstein says, is a direct violation of the bylaw of the Board of Education, which provides that:

"Collections of money from pupils for any purpose shall not be allowed unless by permission of the Board of Education. Canvassing for books or other publications shall not be permitted in the schools."

The Commissioner continues:

"Assuming without conceding that it was desirable in connection with the work of Mr. Davis's bureau to have the photographs taken for identification, it would appear that, with the failure of an appropriation, the work should not have been done. Certainly it should not have been done, as it was, by a method which, while getting the service without cost to the city, would subject the school children or their parents to canvassing by a private corporation upon a basis of official sanction given to it by the Board of Education."

SECRET ARRESTS IN BOMB PLOT

Police Guard Names of 3
Prisoners of Long Grill
—Hunt More.

Three men, supposed to be connected with the Weehawken bomb plot, were taken into custody by Lieutenant Busby, of Acting Captain Tunney's squad, at 6 p. m. yesterday. When brought to Headquarters they were shut up in a private room and questioned until 2 a. m.

The names of the prisoners and all information about them were withheld by the police. Lieutenant Diefenthaler, who admitted that the men were under arrest, said that he had orders to not discuss the case. Shortly after 2 a. m. detectives in Tunney's squad started back uptown, and it was reported that other arrests were expected.

The entrance of Patrick J. McDonald into the German bomb plot case has opened a new field of investigation for Secret Service men, it was learned yesterday. McDonald announced Saturday that he had been retained as chief counsel for Robert Fay, the self-styled German army lieutenant and bomb conspirator, who, with four alleged accomplices, is awaiting the action of the Federal grand jury, which will convene Wednesday.

Federal agents, under instructions from Chief Flynn, are investigating any possible connection between the American Truth Society and Fay and his associates and their financial backers. McDonald, who has shut off Fay's "confessions," is a law partner of Jeremiah O'Leary, president of the American Truth Society, who for months has been the leader of a campaign against the exportation of arms and ammunition from this country to the Allies and against the floating of the half-billion-dollar Anglo-French loan. While McDonald refused to disclose the identity of those who retained him as Fay's chief counsel, O'Leary yesterday said that the only interest he had in the case was to see that justice was being done.

"Fay's case, like many similar cases has already been tried in the newspapers," he said. "They have already condemned him in their vicious campaign against Germany. We have nothing to conceal and nothing to fear. We are neither pro-German nor pro-Allies, but simply pro-American."

Federal agents believe that McDonald's appearance on the scene at the eleventh hour was intended to save Fay's financial backers from exposure. They assert that Fay was about to name those who had charge of the funds with which he was to carry out the plans for destroying ammunition ships and doing other damage to thwart the supplying of munitions to the Allies.

That make the Aeolian-Vocalion musically and artistically pre-eminent.

The Sound Box, which embodies new scientific discoveries. It produces a richer, deeper tone than any other phonograph possesses.

The Symphonic Horn—acoustically perfect in design and material. It eliminates all phonograph stridency and preserves the beautiful tonal characteristics of all instruments and voices.

The New Automatic Stop. With two simple movements it "sets" a record to stop where desired and also starts it playing.

The Revolutionary Graduala, which gives you the new phonograph privilege of expression control—lets you play the phonograph, in fact. This is a wonderful added feature to what other phonographs give, but you only need use it when you want to.

I HAD stopped for a moment in a beautiful music wareroom—and on my journey to the door I paused.

Some one was singing "Annie Laurie" behind me, so sweetly, so touchingly, that I turned. I was listening not to the human voice as I had thought, but to the Aeolian-Vocalion, the new and greater phonograph which I had never heard till then.

That was a wonderful moment for me! I was listening to a song whose depth of emotional appeal depends on the delivery of every tonal shade. And yet each tone was sounding so beautifully and with such a delicate significance, for all its richened quality, that the tears came to my eyes!

So I found myself sitting before this newest type of phonograph, and the salesman was asking me, "Would you not like to sing that song yourself?"

I merely stared, for how could I sing it—I who have no voice but merely a deep feeling and love for beautiful music? He smiled and passed me what he called the Graduala—a seemingly simple device operated by the fingers. He showed me how, with a graduated pressure upon it, I could fairly melt the tones away to an extremity of plaintive sweetness, or swell them forth so that they reflected every deep emotion this tender old song roused within me.

That afternoon I sang "Annie Laurie," not with my own voice but with my own feeling—through the Graduala device which has revolutionized the phonograph.

That musical experience I will never forget. I never had one like it, and though I never expected to buy a phonograph, yet I did buy the Vocalion—so infinitely more wonderful than any phonograph I have ever heard. For no phonograph but the Vocalion enables you to play the phonograph yourself, and so to become—far more than a mere listener—a sharer in music.

Of course, the Vocalion plays itself, exactly as do the older fashioned phonographs, though with far richer and fuller tones. Neither will it vary a record in any way, unless you wish it to. The self-expression device is simply an added privilege which, when you exercise it, adds immeasurably to the interest of the phonograph.

Aeolian Hall will be open Tuesday—Election Day—for those who wish to take advantage of the holiday to hear the Aeolian-Vocalion.
